

Draft TOC for Fatigati Thesis

Chapter 1: Varieties of Emotions in the Animal Motive Soul

1. Aristotelian Background for the Concept of "Moved-Mover".....	2
2. Basic Emotions in Avicenna: Concupiscible and Irascible Appetite.....	5
2.1 Innate Attractions and Aversions in All Psychological Faculties.....	6
2.2 The Final Objects of Concupiscible and Irascible Appetite.....	7
2.3 Concupiscible and Irascible Appetite as Varieties of Shawq.....	10
3. Emotions Oriented Towards Internal Pleasures of the Imagination.....	11
3.1 Clarifying the Nature of External, Internal and Rational Pleasure.....	14
3.2 Varieties of Pleasures and Varieties of Emotions.....	18
3.3 Ruling Out an Alternative Interpretation.....	19
4. Deepening the Category of Emotion: More on the Irascible Faculty.....	19
5. Widening the Category of Emotion: Uniquely Human Emotions and Pleasurable Completion-States as Types of Emotions.....	22
6. The Variety of Emotions Involving the Animal Motive Soul According to Avicenna.....	24

Chapter 2: Avicenna on Uniquely Human Emotions

1. Overview of the Evidence that Human Emotions Involve the Animal Motive Soul.....	1
2. The Practical Intellect as a Motive Principle.....	3
3. Avicenna's Discussions of Specific Uniquely Human Emotions.....	6
3.1 Wonder and Grief.....	7
3.2 Shame as a Response to Social Order.....	10
3.3 Fear and Hope: Emotions Related to a Uniquely Human Awareness of Time.....	11
4. Pleasures of the Rational Soul.....	14
5. Ennobling of the Lower Faculties by Higher Faculties.....	16
6. Conclusion.....	20

Chapter 3: Emotions and Resolution-to-act

1. Introduction: emotion is not sufficient for action.....	1
2. Inclination is distinct from resolution.....	2
3. Different cognitions for different motive faculties.....	5
4. Emotions for means, resolution for ends.....	10
5. Evaluations lead to inclination.....	11
5.1 Evaluations are about particulars.....	12
5.2 Object-evaluations can be imaginative or reason-based.....	16
6. Practical judgments lead to resolution.....	20
6. Conclusion: reviewing the distinctions.....	25

Chapter 4: The Physiology of Emotions in Avicenna

1. Avicenna's writings on the physiology of emotions.....	2
2. The physiology underlying occurrent emotions.....	3

3. The nature of the vital spirit.....	4
4. Physiology of emotional dispositions.....	8
4.1 Observations in need of an explanation.....	8
4.2 Physiological dispositions as a response to issues in the tradition.....	10
4.3 Dispositions for emotions in Avicenna's medical texts.....	12
4.4 Physiological emotional dispositions in relation to moral formation.....	15
5. Physiology of emotional effects.....	17
5.1 Temperamental effects considered to be primarily of the body.....	17
5.2 The distinction between emotions and their temperamental effects.....	20
5.3 Further examples of emotional effects.....	21
5.4 Emotions and the necessity of some sort of physical effect.....	23
5.5 Further effects: action-readiness and cognitive influence.....	26
6. Conclusion.....	27

Chapter 5: Translation of the sections on emotions in Avicenna's Healing: Rhetoric and Compilation: Rhetoric

From Avicenna's Healing : Rhetoric.....	1
§3.1 On persuasive/manipulative rhetorical speeches.....	1
§3.2 On the types of friendship, and hope and fear, and courage and cowardice.....	6
§3.3 On the types of shame [al-istiḥyā'], and its opposite, and kindness [al-minna].....	11
§3.4 On having concern [al-iḥtimām] and pity [al-shafqa] for others, and on envy, revenge, jealousy, zeal and scorn.....	15
§3.5 On the roots of the differences of people with respect to character traits.....	21
From Avicenna's Compilation : Rhetoric.....	1